ABOUT THE BOOK

Climate change mitigation and its regulation by Paris Agreement in 2015 became very highlighted when Trump backed out from it and Biden just after winning election said that he is open to join Paris Agreement 2015. Keeping global temperature below 2 degrees to 1.5 degree was set out as goal in Article 4 of Paris Agreement. Carbon emissions due to anthropogenic reasons is unsurmountable and adaptation and mitigation are the only ways to climate change mitigation. Adaptation of greener technologies, reduction of carbon emissions in specific sectors under common but differential responsibilities of developed and developing nations is doing their bit under UNFCCC. However, the more is less for proper climate change mitigation. Indian specific changes in adaptation of clean energies, contribution to climate change mitigation fund, establishment of International solar alliance shows its readiness and aptness for climate change mitigation. The topsy turvy stand of United States on Paris Agreement has been very shocking to the world but Biden has said to rejoin Paris Agreement which brings life back to climate change mitigation process. The negotiations between developed nations and developing nations of common but differentiated responsibilities is a crucial point. The climate change mitigation, creation of climate change mitigation fund, reduction of carbon emissions, technology transfer, collaborative researches have been debated, negotiation and inserted in Paris Agreement. Parties to Paris Agreement has to reduce the carbon emissions and do the needful under Paris Agreement.
