Pendidikan Sultan Idris, Malaysia

Venue Tentative: Indian Law Institute, New Delhi (Near the Supreme Court of India)

Concept Note

The gender gap remains a pressing global concern, serving as the foundation for numerous violations of human rights. Recognizing this urgent issue, the International Conference on Human Rights and Gender Justice aims to unite scholars, students, human rights activists, and members of civil society on a single platform. Together, we seek to invigorate the discourse surrounding gender inequality, with the ultimate goal of discovering shared solutions and promoting best practices.

Human rights serve as the fundamental link between all individuals, as they are rooted in the concept of human dignity. These rights are universal, transcending boundaries of nationality, religion, belief, race, ethnicity, and gender. However, the escalating gender disparities witnessed across the globe necessitate a collaborative effort. It is crucial to develop effective policies and enactments that can proactively prevent future violations while addressing the pressing need for global justice.

The conference welcomes contributions across various themes, encouraging a multidisciplinary approach to the discussion. By exploring these themes from diverse perspectives, we can gain a comprehensive understanding of the complex challenges at hand and work towards sustainable solutions. One of the primary objectives is to shed light on the root causes of gender inequality. Through academic research and analysis, participants can delve into the social, cultural, and economic factors that contribute to disparities between genders.

The conference seeks to explore the impact of gender inequality on human rights violations.

The International Conference on Human Rights and Gender Justice recognizes the importance of youth engagement in this crucial issue. Therefore, special emphasis will be placed on the contributions of students and young scholars.

Ultimately, this conference aims to foster a vibrant and inclusive platform for dialogue, collaboration, and knowledge-sharing. Through comprehensive discussions, exchange of ideas, and collaborative efforts, we can try to pave the way for a future free from gender inequality and human rights violations.
