of Juridical Sciences, Kolkata

23rd September, 2023 | WBNUJS CAMPUS

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The current regulatory scenario of the new age technology is trending toward higher control. However, several ideas to reform societies with the help of technology have led to severe flaws. Due to these issues, technologists need to understand how the law works, and policymakers and advocates need to understand how the technology comprehends. Failure to acknowledge that presents a threat to more than just some abstract concept of "innovation." A handful of apparent concerns are related to technology by addressed by the legal system. It jeopardizes the core of our current abilities to interact, build groups, and work or trade. It also poses a danger to our safety and privacy. This conference aims to enhance the learning of relevant, authentic, and original research. The conference will stimulate conversation and learning through presentations, panel discussions, and keynote addresses. This conference acknowledges the need for a platform where legal and inter-disciplinary academics may engage in conversations about developing concerns in the field of law and technology and how they might be handled with the aid of public policy. It will allow all stakeholders to debate research concepts and instructional strategies. The goal of the One Day International e-Conference Technology, Law and Public Policy is to generate a common interest in the intricate and nuanced links between modern concerns, including sophisticated technology, privacy, national security, the digital divide, and blockchain. Through this endeavour, we want to establish an epistemic community where we may establish connections across academic, geographical, and cultural lines. Prospective writers are strongly urged to share their expertise and submit research articles to advance the field and benefit everyone involved. For presentation at the conference, high-quality research contributions are cordially invited. These contributions should describe original and unpublished results of conceptual, constructive, empirical, experimental, or descriptive work in the following areas of law: intellectual property law; public policy; labour law; corporate law; and technology laws.
