

Indian law student interns wanted

JURIST (jurist.org; on X @JURISTnews) is recruiting interns from India to be news writers for the award-winning non-profit legal news service based in the US at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law. JURIST is powered by law student volunteers from 50 law schools in more than 20 countries. Join other members of JURIST's India staff from NLUD, GLC Mumbai, NLSIU Bengaluru, Jindal Global, NALSAR Hyderabad, and other leading law schools across India; make friends, learn law as it happens, and build a strong public law writing portfolio for graduate schools and future employers.

Qualifications:

- Journalistic experience is helpful, but not required. Interns will be trained by US-based law professors and professional journalists.
- All applicants must be able to work 40 hours/week for the 6-week internship period from mid-December to mid-February and have no other conflicting commitments. All applicants should have strong writing and communication skills, enthusiasm for news and reporting, good attention to detail and an interest in explaining law-related developments to a worldwide public in plain English. As JURIST is a non-profit, applicants should not expect stipends.

JURIST:

- In the US, JURIST is currently staffed by law student volunteers from Boston University, Cornell, New England Law School, New York Law School, Pitt Law, Southwestern Law School, Stanford, UC Law San Francisco, University of Nevada Las Vegas, and Vermont Law.
- JURIST has a fast-growing network of volunteer legal correspondents and news writers working in countries around the world, including Afghanistan, Australia, Belarus, Canada, India, Iraq, Iran, Ireland, Kenya, Myanmar, New Zealand, Pakistan, Peru, Sri Lanka, Uganda, Ukraine and the UK.
- JURIST is building a network of national and international legal correspondents to support our global coverage of the rule of law in crisis.

Apply:

- Visit www.jurist.org/apply
- Complete the application requirements before 5 PM IST Friday, November 17, 2023.
- Questions? Email JURIST South Asia Chief of Staff Ananya Upadhyia at ananya.upadhyia20@nludelhi.ac.in.

Reporting the rule of law in crisis

JURIST (on the Web at www.jurist.org; on Twitter/X @JURISTnews) is an international legal news service powered by law students. Established in the US at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law in 1996, it's now an independent 501(c)(3) non-profit staffed by over 100 volunteers from law schools in 25 countries working together as members of a virtual editorial team under the direction of several US-based law faculty and professionals. JURIST is the first and only global organization of law students collaborating across borders around the clock.

JURIST's North American law students hail from Harvard, Stanford, Boston University, Fordham, UNLV, Vermont, Pitt, UCalgary and the University of Ottawa. In South America, law students volunteer from Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú (PUCP) in Lima and Saint Anthony University of Cusco. In Europe, JURIST staffers and correspondents come from major law schools in the UK, Ireland, the Netherlands and Ukraine; in Africa they work from Kenya and Uganda; in the Near East, they file from Israel, Iraq and Iran; in Asia, they come from Afghanistan, mainland China, Hong Kong, India, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka; in Australasia they operate from both Australia and New Zealand.

JURIST's mission is to engage law students with the most important events and issues of their time, inviting them to strengthen the rule of law by reporting its challenges and successes around the world while preparing them for informed and responsible leadership in later professional and public life. JURIST news writers, correspondents, commentary writers and editors learn about law as it happens, connect with and interview legal newsmakers, build 21st century legal research and writing skills by finding and explaining in plain English the primary documents behind the headlines, and collaborate with a diverse range of national and international colleagues while sharing their work with a global public.

JURIST's content and its dedicated staff have been featured by major US and international media, including CNN, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Forbes, CBC Radio and the Toronto Star in Canada, and the Mainichi Shimbun newspaper in Japan. JURIST reports and commentaries have been republished and/or cited numerous times in law school casebooks, law reviews and in testimony before US Congressional committees; several have figured in briefs to US federal appellate courts and even the Supreme Court of the United States.

In addition to its Web presence, JURIST is available on social media platforms such as Twitter/X, Threads, Instagram, LinkedIn, Facebook and YouTube, and has developed its own apps, available for both Apple and Android devices. JURIST is open-access across all formats and is paywall- and subscription-free.

JURIST is headed by Pitt Law professor and Canadian Rhodes Scholar Bernard Hibbitts, an Oxford University and Harvard Law School graduate who in the late 1990s hand-coded the early iterations of JURIST's website in raw HTML. Most of JURIST's funding comes from private donors.
