We extend a cordial invitation to legal scholars, practitioners, and policymakers to contribute to an upcoming edited book that scrutinizes the recent legislative endeavours of the Indian Parliament. Specifically, this edited volume will focus on the repeal of the Indian Penal Code (IPC) 1860. This statute is poised to be supplanted by the Bhartiya Nyaya Sanhita, 2023. This volume endeavours to engage with the legal community in a nuanced exploration of the legal, procedural, and socio-political implications ensuing from these transformative legislative reforms.

This edited volume endeavours to serve as a seminal repository of scholarly inquiry into the repeal and replacement of the IPC (Bhartiya Dand Sanhita) and the proposed enactment of the Bhartiya Nyaya Sanhita in India. By fostering interdisciplinary dialogue and scholarly engagement, this volume aims to enrich understanding of the legal, procedural, and sociopolitical ramifications intrinsic to these legislative reforms.

Objective: The overarching objective of this edited volume is to facilitate a comprehensive and interdisciplinary examination of the repeal and replacement of the Indian Penal Code, and the concomitant introduction of the Bhartiya Nyaya Sanhita. By interrogating these legislative developments through a multifaceted lens, this volume seeks to elucidate the underlying rationales, challenges, and potential ramifications inherent in this paradigm shift in India's legal landscape.

Themes for Contributions: Contributions are invited on the following themes:

1. Need for a new criminal law
2. Punishments
