

New section of the Brazilian Journal of International Law

The Brazilian Journal of International Law is pleased to inform that a new section entitled International law in Culture / O Direito Internacional na atualidade cultural has been inaugurated with the aim of publishing short reviews of new literature books, movies, documentaries and expositions which have a connection with international law and international relations. The objective is to portray the treatment of international law and international relations in these creative mediums. Reviews will be received on a continuous basis. There are no specific deadlines.

SUBMISSION PROCESS

Manuscripts may be submitted in Portuguese, French, Spanish or English. Non-native speakers are strongly encouraged to have their paper read by a native speaker. The reviews must be submitted through the Journal's website: <https://www.publicacoes.uniceub.br/rdi>

The Journal will receive contributions from professors and researchers who are PhD holders and from PhD students.

Professor Nitish Monebhurrun (Chief-Editor of the Brazilian Journal of International Law)

Professor Harvey Mpoto (Assistant Editor of the Brazilian Journal of International Law)