About the Certificate Course

The certificate course is intended to give learners an overview of the aspects of maritime law. By doing this course, learners will be able to better appreciate the practices of maritime law in particular and overall developments in the field of maritime and shipping industry policy. This will enable the learner to broaden their horizons in legal practice by adding knowledge of niche areas of law that seldom find sufficient space in traditional legal curricula.

MARINE TRADE

The beginning of India's maritime commercial history dates back to 3000 BC. During this time, the inhabitants of Indus Valley Civilisation had maritime trade link with Mesopotamia. The excavation at Mohenjo-Daro and Harappa has revealed ample evidence that maritime activities flourished during this period. Drawing inspiration from this Legacy, India is envisioning development of modern commercial maritime activities.
