About The Conference

The fast advancement of science and technology in the current era has had a profound impact on all facets of existence. In the contemporary world, crime and criminology are no longer regarded as distinct domains, but rather as interconnected with various other sciences. Political science, sociology, psychology, anthropology, economics, and other multidisciplinary subjects are other few mentioned field in this list. A crucial advancement in crime prevention has been the adoption of a multidisciplinary approach in the field of criminal justice administration. This development is noteworthy as criminology seeks to prevent crime in society rather than only understanding criminal behaviours in theory. In a dynamic environment, criminology, law, and forensic science serve as fundamental components of the contemporary criminal justice system.

Objective of the Conference

The “International Conference on Forensic Science, Law and Criminal Justice” aims

- to bring together experts, scholars, and practitioners from around the world with the common goal of strengthening our criminal justice systems to effectively address the challenges of the 21st century and beyond.
- to investigate new and developing patterns and advancements in these crucial areas.
- to promote interdisciplinary collaboration, and to foster ideas and skills, with the goal of achieving a comprehensive grasp of modern criminal justice concerns.

- to provide participants with up-to-date research, technologies, and best practices to establish a fair, efficient, and flexible criminal justice system that can effectively address the intricate and ever-changing nature of crime in the modern era.

We extend an invitation to academicians, researchers, policymakers, and law professionals to join us in this undertaking.
