

Call for Papers

Collection: Changes, Crises, and Opportunities for the Relationship between Public International Law and SocietyGuest Edited by

Dr. Cristina Elena POPA TACHE, Professor, "Andrei Şaguna" University, Romania

The Changes, Crises, and Opportunities for the Relationship between Public International Law and Society collection brings to the forefront the profound metamorphosis of public international law in the face of an increasingly interconnected global society. The traditions and norms of classical international law, once the cornerstones of the world order, are now confronted with the need for radical transformation.

Through its articles, this collection aims to unveil the opportunities for reforming public international law and to explore the possibilities of creating a new legal framework, one capable of responding to the global realities of the 21st century. This is an invitation to reimagine international law not merely as a set of norms but as a dynamic mechanism capable of supporting a fair, sustainable, and resilient global society.

Keywords: Transformation of international law; Classical or traditional public international law; Global society; State sovereignty; Global crises; Non-state actors; Technologies; International legal reform; Global interconnectedness; Forced migration; Global justice

Discover Global Society is a transdisciplinary, open access journal publishing societal research on all areas of our modern global society and its challenges.

- Indexed in DOAJ and SCOPUS with a CiteScore 2024 of 0.4.
- Welcomes research on all aspects of globalization, neoliberalism and internationalism.

SPRINGER NATURE GROUP
SDG Programme
supporting the Sustainable Development Goals

Please click here or scan the QR code to visit our Collections Website
Submission Deadline: 31 December 2025