Background and Rationale

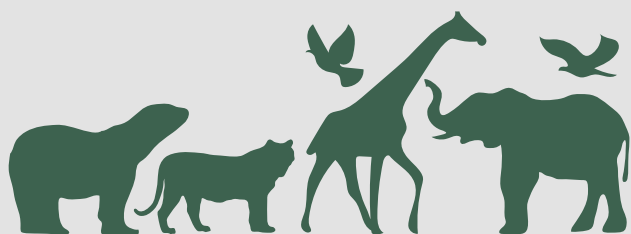

Human-animal conflict (HAC) poses urgent legal, social, economic and conservation challenges across scales. As populations expand and land use intensifies, encounters—from crop and livestock losses to attacks on people and infrastructure—are increasing, causing livelihood harm, biodiversity decline, and retaliatory killings. Legal and governance systems lag: unclear liability, slow compensation, fragmented planning, weak recognition of community rights, and ethical dilemmas around translocation or lethal control.

This international conference will convene jurists, policymakers, conservationists, community leaders, insurers, technologists and civil society to bridge law and practice and to advance equitable, evidence-based pathways for humane coexistence.

OBJECTIVE

- 1.To examine the evolving legal framework, including the Wildlife (Protection) Act, 1972, and its effectiveness in mitigating conflict.
- 2.To deliberate on the role of the Forest Rights Act, 2006 in safeguarding the rights of humans and wildlife.
- 3.To develop policy recommendations for effective legal management of human-animal conflict.
- 4.To promote awareness of legal provisions for coexistence and sustainable solutions.
