IPEM Law Academy Ghaziabad is organizing an International Conference on “AI And Constitutionalism : Safe guarding Rights In An Automated Society” (Under the aegis of the Internal Quality Assurance Cell-IQAC) on 29th & 30th January, 2027.

We invite administrators, academicians, research scholars, social activists, NGOs, students and others to contribute their thoughts-provoking original extended abstract & papers for presentation and discussion in International Conference-2027.

Conference Overview

The rapid advancement of Artificial Intelligence (AI) is fundamentally transforming the way societies function, governments operate, justice is delivered, and individuals interact with technology. From automated decision-making and algorithmic governance to generative AI, facial recognition, predictive technologies and AI-assisted dispute resolution, the growing integration of AI into public and private life presents both unprecedented opportunities and complex constitutional challenges.

The 7th International Conference on “AI and Constitutionalism: Safeguarding Rights in an Automated Society” seeks to provide a multidisciplinary platform for examining the evolving relationship between Artificial Intelligence, constitutional governance, fundamental rights, democracy, justice, ethics and the rule of law.

The conference aims to critically examine whether existing constitutional frameworks are adequately equipped to regulate emerging AI technologies and, where necessary, explore possibilities for developing rights-based, accountable, transparent and human-centric AI governance frameworks.

A particular focus of the conference will be on the impact of AI on constitutional rights and democratic institutions, including privacy, equality, freedom of speech and expression, access to justice, due process, non-discrimination and human dignity. The deliberations will also explore the challenges posed by algorithmic bias, automated governmental decisions, surveillance technologies, deepfakes, digital profiling and the use of AI in law enforcement and judicial processes.

Objectives of the Conference

To provide a multidisciplinary platform

To provide an interdisciplinary platform for academicians, legal practitioners, judges, researchers, policymakers, arbitrators, mediators, technology experts and students to share innovative research, emerging perspectives and best practices concerning Artificial Intelligence, Law and Constitutionalism.

To examine the constitutional and legal dimensions of AI

To critically examine the impact of Artificial Intelligence on fundamental rights, constitutional governance, justice delivery, rule of law, privacy, equality, human dignity, democracy and access to justice, while exploring the emerging legal challenges associated with AI-driven decision-making, automation and digital transformation.

To promote responsible, ethical and rights-based AI governance transparent, accountable and human-centric AI governance by examining appropriate legal and constitutional safeguards for the responsible use of Artificial Intelligence across justice delivery, data protection, intellectual property, criminal justice, corporate affairs and other emerging areas of law.

About The International Journal of Legal Science and Innovation

The International Journal of Legal Science and Innovation (ISSN 2581-9453) is an online, bi-monthly, scholarly, peer-reviewed international journal published by the VidhiAagaz Group. It provides a credible, indexed platform for original legal research from students, academics and practitioners worldwide.

IJLSI envisages itself at the forefront of reinforcing innovation in the conduct of law and the legal sciences. Law is essentially dynamic: it adapts, transitionally, to changing times. Believing that such engagement is metamorphic, the Journal intends to be a leader in facilitating this contemporary discussion — pairing rigorous double-blind review with rapid, transparent editorial handling.

About LEGEX LEO

LEGEX LEO is a legal education and professional development platform founded by Adv.Khushi Aggarwal, focused on bridging the gap between academic learning and practical legal practice. The platform works towards empowering law students, young lawyers, and legal professionals through practice-oriented certification courses, workshops, masterclasses, legal research initiatives, mentorship, law competitions, professional skill-development programmes, and legal updates. LEGEX LEO also promotes greater exposure to courtroom practice, legal drafting, research, POSH & other legal trainings, technology, and emerging areas of law. With a focus on practical and career-oriented legal education, LEGEX LEO aims to equip the legal community with skills that extend beyond conventional classroom learning and support continuous professional development.

About International Legex Law Journal (ILLJ)

International Legex Law Journal (ILLJ) is an academic legal research platform dedicated to promoting quality legal scholarship and providing researchers, academicians, practitioners, and law students with a platform to contribute meaningful research. ILLJ encourages original, well-researched, and academically sound contributions and aims to facilitate wider dissemination of legal research through its academic publication initiatives. Research papers published through ILLJ are indexed and discoverable on Google Scholar, enhancing their academic visibility and accessibility to the research community. Through its research-oriented approach, ILLJ seeks to contribute to the development of legal scholarship and encourage meaningful academic discourse among members of the legal and academic community.
